The Impact of Political Geographic Factors on Accidents Guilan Province Road

Nemat Alizadeh seyghalan*,Dr Omran AliZadeh,

One of the common problems of today's societies is driving accidents that have had many health, social and economic dimensions. Hence, driving accidents is one of the important issues in internal and external transport. Accordingly, the present study hypothesizes that the factors affecting traffic accidents can affect the political organization of the province of Guilan. The explanation of the factors influencing driving accidents has been paid to the political organization of the province of Guilan and by asking the question which factors affect road traffic accidents in the political organization of the province of Guilan? This finding has shown that road safety is at the forefront of the advancement of transportation networks, which means that before the expansion of communication networks, it is necessary to implement practical measures to reduce road accidents technically. This is accomplished by understanding that the occurrence of the observed human-natural-managerial risks-is realized, eliminated or reduced.
