Seyed Roya Hoseini Amirkadih*,

Didactic literature is a branch of literature in which different educational and moral issues are addressed in terms of literary texts and poems. Study of different branches and themes of the didactic literature has made it possible to know the ancestors' viewpoint on the life and moral issues. Therefore, this research has been conducted through descriptive-analytical method and studied themes and issues related to the didactic literature in Adib Saber's poems, and found out the intellectual view and thoughts of this poet about moral and educational issues. The obtained results showed that Adib Saber addressed different themes of didactic literature, but in comparison to other themes raised in the poetry book of this poet, didactic literature was less important and the issues were divided into three sections of edification, civil politics and household management. Meanwhile, edification divided into two types of inner education and social and external education contains most of the poems. Among edification themes, the poet mostly emphasized the divine piety, thinking about death and attention to the life of the hereafter. In the civil politics, he paid much attention to the justice. However, among the three sections raised, household management had less frequency in the didactic literature of poems of this poet.
