come has that blessings divine the of one is Lagoon Anzali The Abstract to our attention in today's natural forms of interactions. In addition to the beauty of the northern region and the tourist attraction, this lagoon is the habitat of many species of animals. Unfortunately, in the past years, it has been unfairly attacked by various types of pollution. Civil liability is one of the important branches of law that can be examined both by civil law and criminal law; it should, with the attention and support of laws in the field of environmental law, involve environmental perpetrators and agents such as Anzali Lagoon Depending on their share of the fault, they will identify and guarantee the proper implementation. On the other hand, by passing the law on protection, restoration and management of the country's wetlands, which was recently approved by the parliament and passed to the environment through legal procedures. The legal disengagement of this issue has been resolved and it is hoped that the environmental organization, as the reference authority for the destruction of pollution and pollution of wetlands, will act correctly with its legal obligations, and in the future will see that it will not be destroyed or at least To reach the destruction of the country's wetlands, especially the Anzali wetland. In this thesis, we have tried to study the environmental factors of Anzali wetland and its officials through field studies and library studies. Due to the confidentiality of and access to legal files, it was not possible to clear and accurate authorities and votes. Keywords: environment, civil liability, fault, Anzali Lagoon
