
Study of legal and legal issues in oocyte donation

Sara GHoloobi khanacha*,Dr. Seyed Mohammad Asadinejad,

Women may not have the reproductive ability due to the different factors. One of these factors is impaired egg production. Using assisted reproductive technology, medical science provides the chance of bearing child for those infertile couples who are not able to bear a child under normal conditions. One way to treat this disorder can be egg donation by a third party, jurisprudence and legal bases of donation and its transfer have caused to arise new issues in private law. Legislator has allowed transferring eggs with legal standards and conditions set forth in the law. But the concept of legal standards in the egg transfer process or using approved methods proposed by legislator is accompanied by some ambiguities. Also, regarding to the parentage of the child born with the egg donation, according to the opinions of lawyers and jurists, it seems that the identity of the child born with the egg donation refers to its recipients.

Keywords : Keywords: egg cell, artificial insemination, infertility, parentage
