The Hadi's plan in each village has many economic, social, and cultural consequences in each village, and always seek to create a favorable situation against the existing situation. It is a descriptive and analytical study which aimed to analyze the role of local management in implementation of rural Hadi's plans in villages located in the Tolamat district of Someh Sara city using library, documentary and field studies. The principle purposes of this study was to analyze the role of local management in implementing rural Hadi's plans in the villages of Tolamat district, to investigate the performance of managers in the villages of the Tolamat district and their participation with the implementers of these projects, and identify villages in which the Hadi's plan was implemented and eventually, provide solutions to increase the role of local managers in participating with these plans implementers. The results indicated that the highest performance of local managers has been in the spatial-physical dimension. As the local managers have a good performance in terms of cooperation with executives in relation to the construction of new passageways in the village, the improvement and modernization of the roads, the safety of residential units through the issuance of building permits, the supervision of construction, the development and improvement of the countryside, increasing the lighting of rural roads, and collaboration with the relevant managers on the implementation of the Hadi's rural plan. The results also demonstrated that the lowest performance of local managers is related to the economic dimension so that did not perform well in this regard. Therefore, it can be said that one of the most important causes of weak performance of local managers in other dimensions is the restrictions responsibility of the local managers. The findings revealed that more than 80% of respondents believe that local managers have had a very significant impact on the implementation of rural Hadi's plans and reducing the review of this plan. Furthermore, we can find that the involvement of the local managers and executives of these plans has a great role in locating the services provided in the village. As well as, the managers of these villages stated that the implementation of the Hadi's plan by the government is beneficial and have a lot of satisfaction with the implementation of the rural Hadi's plan in their village and the performance of the executives and the Islamic Council.
