

Iran's Missile Defense Policy Since 2005 and Its Impact on Regional Diplomacy in the Islamic Republic of Iran

Ebrahim Sayari Taromsari*, Dr. Seyed Mehdi Moradi,

Abstract After the revolution, especially during the imposed war, significant efforts were made to increase defense capabilities and military programs, the main focus of which was the acquisition of advanced missile technology. Since missile capability is today the fundamental principle of countries in deterrence, Iran is obviously considering increasing its missile capabilities in order to increase the power and scope of deterrence, because Iran is one of the most equipped countries in the world with a missile technology that is nationally unique in the region and based on the basic principles The deterrence is in the defense doctrine of the country. Accordingly, the purpose of this research is to investigate Iran's missile defense policy since 2005 and its impact on regional diplomacy in the Islamic Republic of Iran. The research methodology used is based on the applied objective and based on the descriptive-analytical nature of documentary studies and content analysis methods. is. The results of this research showed that whatever increases the bargaining power of the Islamic Republic of Iran in international negotiations, it is "self-defense" in the field of defense capabilities of the country. Missile technology is a pivotal role as an effective tool in Iran's defense-security strategy. Increasing missile capabilities as a native technology will create a formidable security deterrent that will strengthen Iran's comprehensive deterrence and achieve strategic defense objectives - It would be desirable. And also considering the school policy adopted by the Islamic Republic to issue the Islamic Revolution beyond its borders, one can find a close connection between the Islamic Republic's foreign policy (developmental) and its missile development plan Receive And it can be said that the missile system of the Islamic Republic is an important instrument in foreign policy, which would allow diplomats the Republic of Iran to enter regional diplomacy.
