
The role of the wife's request for divorce in determining the type of divorce

Atefe Vaezi Lord*,

One of the effective factors in the family is the issue of divorce which has its consequences on the legal, social, cultural, economic and other divisions. This study will examine the role of the wife's request for divorce in determining the type of divorce. Divorce is at the request of either the wife or Bain or the referent. The mere conclusion of a divorce by the will of the couple does not turn into a divorce, and it does not appear that the mere request for divorce by the spouse and the occurrence of the divorce by the couple or the divorcee will result in a divorce. What distinguishes Baen's divorce the referent is that in the Ba'en the divorce is first filed by the wife, whether or not she hates it, and secondly, the couple has changed their minds so the marriage would be a two-pronged agreement. And again, the divorce will be at the request of the ruler.
