
Change of business citizenship

alireza hoseinkhah*,

Abstract The company can change its citizenship if its residence is changed. In all companies, if partners unanimously decide to change their nationality, the company changes its nationality, provided that it also relocates its headquarters to the new country. But what majority can change its nationality? For some companies, the legislator has explicitly stated this. For example, for limited liability companies, the legislator has stated that no majority can change the citizenship of the company. (Founder, Ordinary, Extraordinary) Does not have the right to change company citizenship. In the case of other companies, the legislator has not made any specific provision. But change of residence does not require the consent of all partners. This change of nationality must be permitted. In relation to limited liability companies, it is important to note that the partners of the company cannot change the nationality of the company unless unanimously (110 MW). Keyword: Business, Citizenship Change, Residence, Headquarters and Operations
